Miguel Méndez, from Pilgrims in Aztlán I FELL ON THE PLAINS that divide the border like someone falling into a no-man's-land. In the desert, virgin in the absence of any will toward the creative, my words threaded their way among the dust storm. The sky became tinged with a black wind that cloaked the dunes with layers of pale sand.

Nagualli: Miguel Méndez, from Pilgrims in Aztlán

According to the Aztlan website, he made the following comment on August 29, 2003. When we reach majority status over a greater geographic spread by 2030, the national, state and local governments certainly will be heavily indebted and nearly bankrupt, knee-deep in racial turmoil based on meager allocations for the public good.
